1.0.U.' Government Draws Ike's Fire: Virus Fells Nixon

WASHINGTON (AP)-Republicans rallying around the country and the casboxes got a ringing call Thursday night from Dwight D. Eisenhower to "roll up our sleeves and get going" against Democrats he accused of espousing "I.O.U." government.

From border to border, the party loyal gathered for a string of 16 dinners and one public dinners they called "R.S.V.P." affairs, for "Republicans Start Victory Program.

The immediate goal was to raise money for the 1962 campaigns to try to wrest control of the House from the Democrats and at least pare down the Democratic margin in the Senate.

against the rightists.

EDITOR'S NOTE — Among the theories of Birch Society founder Robert Welch is the "principle of inversion." It holds that Communists may operate directly contrary to their apparent interests just to confuse people. Some intriguing appli-cations are discussed in this fourth of six articles on the far right.

By RELMAN MORIN

AP Special Correspondent One eerie, reverse-English aspect of the climate created in the United States by the rise of the rightist movement haunts many Americans.

They fear that the superpatriot, far from hurting the Communists, may in fact be helping them by Mosk's report on the society quotes an article in the Literary Gazette of Moscow. dated April 14, 1961, as saying: "Lenin said that the most ardent foes of communism will eventually become frightened and suspicious of everybody who does not agree with them.

"Now the Communist movement has gained unexpectedly a new supporter. His name is Robert Welch.

The article, as quoted by Mosk, then cites some of Welch's charges against highly placed Americans and says:

"This is the teaching of Robert Welch and his John Birch Society. Here is more proof that Lenin's teachings and predictions were

The Rev. Robert A. Graham, wrote in the Roman Catholic magazine, America: "Applying Welch's own principle of inversion, a perfect case can be made out for the thesis that Welch himself is a Communist, so much has he helped the Red cause in the United States

Activity Reports Made By Officers

MOOREFIELD, W. Va.-A state neeting of the West Virginia Wing the Civil Air Patrol was held at the Firemen's Hall in Moorefield Sunday with some 60 members of the Wing Staff and CAP Squadron Commanders in attendance. Presiding over the meeting which followed the noon banquet was Col. Robert E. Gobel of Charleston, Wing Commander for West Virginia CAP. The meeting was a business session covering most of the administrative reports for the state organization.

Included in the agenda was the report on communications by Lt. Col. Robert Hough, Clarksburg. who said the state now had 442 radio stations in the nation's 14,197 stations CAP network. Major Robert Dewey, Charleston, reported on finances for the state CAP. Lt. Col. Robert Godfrey, Salem, Wing Chaplain reported on his section. Lt. Col. Mel Hollar, Martinsburg, Wing Information Officer, reported that the state ranked first in the region as of Earl Hammack, Charleston, re- Amtower. Economic Theory And Practice Americans are a practical folk. But there are many problems, especially in the natural sciences, in which sound practice is hardly possible without a basis of sound theory.

Einstein's theories of relativity, based on abstruse mathematical equations, were once considered too theoretical to have much practical effect. But nuclear bombs are appallingly real.

Similarly, when the President's Council of Economic Advisers offered a highly theoretical analysis of an intensely practical problem, it was not immediately clear how the theory can be applied in practice.

The problem is wages and prices and their effect on the national economy. Union labor is something of a sacred cow; who was ever elected to office by advocating lower wages?

Yet this problem is basic to the nation's economic health. If U. S. inflation is mild compared to that of some countries, creeping inflation not only weakens the economy but erodes the gains of both workers and industry. In international trade, we are in danger of pricing ourselves out of the world market, and our balance of payments suffers.

The Council of Economic Advisers concludes that wage increases can be made without hurting the economy if they do not exceed gains in productivity. Any business executive could have told it that.

In industries where wages are already relatively high, the council suggests that at least part of the productivity increase should be used to lower prices. Henry Ford practiced that 50

The council says that government controls over wages and prices are both undesirable and impractical. This results in near unanimity of thinking on that line.

Excessive wage settlements, followed by higher prices, spill over and harm the whole economy. Higher wages alone cannot raise the standard of living.

These Days

By George E. Sokolsky

Fritz Kreisler

To have known Fritz Kreisler was to have tasted of the richness of centuries of human culture. During recent years, he and I spent our summers in the Berkshires and it was a joy to be with a man whose genius knew no limit. He was as much at home in Greek, Latin, and Hebrew as in the modern languages. He could discuss world politics in amazing detail. His knowledge of music was overwhelming and withal he was a modest man who was interested in the aspirations of the simplest, Tanglewood student.

During his last years, he was partially deaf and blind, the result of an accident when a truck hit and knocked him down and he lived in darkness. Even so, he did not lose his interest in the affairs of the world and a conversation with him was always an ever-

Two tragic occasions stand out in my memory. One was at the Dutch Treat Club when Fritz decided that he would try to play the piano and he could no longer strike the right notes. He was full of fun that night and could laugh at his mistakes.

The other was at Fiddletop, the home of Zino Francescatti in Monterey in the Berkshires. Our families were gossiping after lunch. Mrs. Harriet Kreisler always watched over Fritz motherly, fearful that he would be made miserable by his inabilities, but the two violinists got into a corner and had what might vulgarly be called a jam session. They played on and on, Kreisler showing Francescatti how he played Beethoven's Violin

It was probably the last time that Kreisler played either the violin or the piano. He was a very happy man. He loved the Berkshires; he adored Francescatti; he was among friends. He let himself go.

I do not recall Kreisler coming to a Tanglewood concert after that. In fact, when I called on him during the following summer, he was already suffering from the numerous ailments that beset him. But we talked of the many worlds he loved.

To Kreisler, music was not something apart. It was a manifestation of life in all its richness. He composed perhaps 200 pieces in his lifetime, everything from the noblest music to a light opera, "Apple Blossom." For such a sentence as this, Fritz would have reprimanded me. He would have said that all music that is beautiful and that adds to the richness of life is good and that snobbery is always intolerable.

He loved the United States. Although during the frightful years of World War I, he suffered from a divided loyalty, he really never could think of his beloved Austria and his beloved America as separate or as enemies. In front of the Heaton Hall Hotel in Stockbridge, Massachusetts, stands a flagpole, erected in honor of Fritz Kreisler. I was present at the ceremonies and made a short address. The American flag was raised and flew each day during the season. It will be a permanent memorial to a noble soul. It will be his American memorial.

Fritz Kreisler was beyond doubt the greatest violinist of his day and although younger generations cannot hear him play, the phonograph and radio will continue to bring him to them as it will continue to bring him to future generations. He loved life and he loved humanity and he knew no rancor or envy, expecting the next generation to be more wonderful than the one he would leave behind. His sense of humor was as rich as his understanding of man was keen.

To him music was not a profession but an art that brought light and love into a world that was cursed by hate and prejudice and war. Music was for him the antithesis of evil and his heart was open to all the youngsters who came to Tanglewood to find the richness and beauty that music could bring into life. He was never a big man, aloof; he was always Fritz. But he could no longer hear. Like Beethoven, music became not sound but the grandeur of the intellect. He could think; he could remember, but he could not listen to the violins which he loved so. These he gave to the violinists who could play these noble instruments.

Big Mobsters Heading For Miami; Is Crime Convention Coming Up?

WASHINGTON - The manicured mobsters who rule Chicago's rackets have suddenly and mysteriously departed for Miami, en masse, for what may be another crime convention like the notorious 1957 gathering at Apalachin, N. Y. Whispers from the underworld have convinced the Chicago Police Department's intelligence unit that crime czars from other cities are also converging upon Miami.

The best guess is that they are heading south, not to escape the cold wave but to discuss what to do about Attorney General Robert Kennedy's heat wave.

For the President's shockheaded, dynamic young brother has launched a drive against the underworld tycoons that is already gripping them like a vise. Using his influence with the White House, he has united the feuding federal enforcement agencies into the most formidable army of lawmen ever to wage war upon organized crime.

They now keep all the nation's top racketeers under constant scrutiny, watching for the first slip that will take them out of the sheltered backwaters of local law and land them in the federal net.

Another possible purpose for an underworld summit conference might be to settle the criminal estate of the late Charles "lucky Luciano, who recently dropped dead of a heart attack in Italy.

From his exile in Naples, the deported vice lord continued to hold some sway over the American underworld where he had, been the No. 1 power. His death could now be causing repercussions, a federal agent suggested to this column.

Heading the Chicago delegation to Miami is Sam Giancana, who has replaced Tony Accardo as boss of the Chicago underworld.

Tough Tony made the mistake of reporting a red Mercedes sports car as a "business expense" in his income tax returns. For this error in judgment, he is now serving a six-year prison term in somewhat less pretentious quarters than his 22-room Chicago mansion with its goldplated plumb-

Giancana & Co.

Giancana's only serious rival for power in the Chicago underworld is William "Willie Potatoes" Daddano, who is described in federal reports as a "torturer and murderer." Yet Daddano is the father of five children, lives quietly in North Riverside, Ill.

Chicago plainclothes men say he hangs out at the Armory

Lounge in Forest Park, Ill. The balding Giancana, who also goes by the alias "Sam Mooney," is believed by federal agents to have widespread liquor, gambling, and shrimp-boat interests from Chicago to the Caribbean. A federal task force is now checking on his hidden holdings in Las Vegas where he was overheard recently giving orders to the supposed owners of a famous night spot.

Left with three daughters by his late wife, Giancana now runs around with a shapely lady named Ladana Collins. Undercover agents say they hang out in Chicago at the Norwood House, Villa

Venice, and Armory Lounge. Giancana's underworld rule is backed by three ruthless "enforcers," known and feared in Chicago as the "Three Doms." They

In form, it was an enlarged session of the National Security Council, which customarily sits on Thursdays. But the advance notices requiring attendance by all those invited, and the warning that no deputies would be admitted, had already indicated that something special was afoot.

What was afoot, in fact, was nothing less than a lecture by the President of the United States on the political-strategic design he has worked out during his first year in office. The leading policy makers of the State Department, the civilian chiefs of the Pentagon, the Joint Chiefs of Staff, and a contingent from the C. I. A. about fifty persons in all - com-

In this connection, the President reminded his audience of Nikita S. Thus the exposition ended.

Among those present, there were only a few men like Secretary of Defense Robert McNamara and Deputy Secretary Roswell Gilpatric who were already entirely familiar with all parts of the President's theory, and with his ideas about the inter-working of all the parts. The President apparently decided that a lecture was needed for this very reason, primarily because his Palm Springs meetings with Defense Department leaders had given evidence that even the Joint Chiefs of Staff did not fully understand what was in his mind.

If the Joint Chiefs themselves still needed enlightment, it can be understood why the theory of the Kennedy defense program requires further analysis in another

It has been said that the victim of epilepsy is more handicapped by the attitude of society than by his disability. Social barriers and discriminations prevent many of these individuals from leading a

But this is only part of the story. In the past, parents of epileptics were afraid to consult a physician because of the stigma of the disease. Some kept their afflicted children locked in the attic lest the "family weakness" would be discovered. Bromides were obtained through mail order prescription agencies. All were given the same instructions which meant all were treated alike. We know that many of these persons might have improved if the dosage had been increased by one teaspoon.

Goren on Bridge ·· [@ 1962: By The Chicago Tribune] West opened the four of Both vulnerable. North deals. spades and the jack held the trick. When a low diamond was led to declarer's queen, West won with the ace. Recognizing the futility of continuing the attack in spades, he felt that unless East had a preponderance of heart strength there was probably little hope for the de> fense. A shift to that suit netted five more tricks for down two.
